the brief

Quiet Storm are an advertising agency based in London. They have worked on various brands such as Mazda, Mitsubishi and Apple Tango to name a few. We were asked to create a microsite for a national competition launched by Quiet Storm which was publicized in the Guardian and other creative magazines.

our approach

We knew that the site would be viewed by a huge amount of creative people, so we created something that complemented their site and was unusual.

result!

The final website was quirky and simple, there was a nice synergy between the sites but Projectile was unique enough to stand out on its own. This website had a national launch and the client was more than happy with the final look of the site.
